Effective Date: 2024.08.01

1. Introduction

Investing in cryptocurrencies and other digital assets involves significant risk and may not be suitable for all investors. This Risk Disclosure statement outlines the potential risks associated with investing through X-Capital DCI ("we," "us," "our"). By investing with X-Capital DCI, you acknowledge and accept these risks and agree to be bound by this disclosure.

2. Market Risk

Cryptocurrency markets are highly volatile and can experience rapid and substantial price fluctuations. The value of digital assets may increase or decrease at any time, leading to potential losses. Market conditions can be influenced by various factors, including economic events, regulatory changes, technological developments, and market sentiment.

3. Liquidity Risk

Cryptocurrencies may have limited liquidity, making it difficult to buy or sell assets at desired prices. In some cases, you may not be able to liquidate your investments quickly or at all. Market conditions, trading volumes, and other factors can impact the liquidity of digital assets.

4. Regulatory Risk

The regulatory environment for cryptocurrencies and digital assets is evolving and may change rapidly. Changes in laws, regulations, or enforcement actions by government authorities can impact the value and legality of certain assets. Regulatory developments can also affect the operation of cryptocurrency exchanges and other service providers.

5. Security Risk

Digital assets are susceptible to cybersecurity threats, including hacking, fraud, and theft. Despite our efforts to implement robust security measures, there is no guarantee that your investments will be completely secure. Losses due to security breaches can result in the partial or total loss of your investment.

6. Technology Risk

The technology underlying cryptocurrencies, including blockchain technology, is complex and may contain vulnerabilities. Technical issues, software bugs, or network disruptions can impact the functionality and security of digital assets. Additionally, advancements in technology may render certain assets obsolete or less valuable.

7. Operational Risk

Operational risks, such as system failures, human errors, and process deficiencies, can affect the execution of trades and the management of your investments. While we strive to maintain efficient and reliable operations, there is no guarantee that operational risks will be completely mitigated.

8. Counterparty Risk

Investing in cryptocurrencies often involves interactions with third parties, such as exchanges, custodians, and other service providers. The financial stability and operational integrity of these counterparties can impact the safety and value of your investments. Counterparty defaults or failures can lead to losses.

9. No Guarantee of Profits

There is no assurance that you will achieve profits or avoid losses when investing in cryptocurrencies. Past performance is not indicative of future results. The value of your investments may fluctuate, and you may lose all or part of your investment.

10. Personal Responsibility

As an investor, you are responsible for conducting your own research and due diligence before making any investment decisions. You should carefully consider your financial situation, risk tolerance, and investment objectives before investing in cryptocurrencies. We recommend seeking professional financial advice if you have any doubts or concerns.
